Office of Attorney General, State of Nebraska, and then it has a little explanation of what this card is. And actually on this card, or on this piece of paper, I have both sides of this postcard. And this was a program that was set up by, as I understand it, Attorney General Don Stenberg some years ago. And when he would go to State Fairs or go out to talk to various groups, he would hand out these postcards. And at the top is an explanation and, by the way, our new Attorney General is carrying out the same tradition of allowing our citizens to be placed on a no-call list at no cost. And what you do is you basically...you read the instructions up there at the top, and then you tear off the top part, you fill in your name, and you mail it. And all you have to do is place a 33 cent stamp on there or a 37 cent stamp, whatever the cost is, and it doesn't require any legislation. And, further, if you look at this postcard, in the upper right-hand corner is the web site for the Attorney General's Office. And, again, this is nothing that the current Attorney General started, but he is continuing this tradition. Go to that web site and at the upper right-hand corner is a way that you can actually do this on line. You can actually apply on line. Now if you do it on line, I guess it costs you a few dollars, but if you send in the postcard, it's free; well, 37 cents. And I don't know what it costs...

SENATOR SCHIMEK: One minute.

SENATOR BOURNE: ...to pass a bill. And, again, I haven't read Senator Smith's amendment carefully. I don't know...the original version of the bill required us to hire one and half people, so we would have to have hired two people, and now he is saying that that's not required. We don't have to hire the two people. But, again, I contend to you or contend that this is not necessary on two levels. One, we have an agency within this state that's already doing this without legislation. And, two, if we want to wrap it up and make it even tighter, why let's let the federal government do it. And I realize that it's not necessarily for free because that is our tax dollars there, but what we're doing if we say let's have a duplicate state system, we're going to pay our federal tax dollars to create that system and then we're also going to pay at the state level to create a duplicate, nonnecessary system. And I'm just simply suggesting
